Now

With F.M.L.

Labor Day means the usual September 1 start of "World War III" as dove hunters converge on grain-filled fields in the Milam area.

Good dove populations are noted throughout the area of Williamson, Bell and Milam Counties, where maize has become a major source of revenue and fall feeding for birds.

In fact, experts say the Central Texas Blackland Prairie has produced a dove crop "well above" average.

Unplowed maize fields attract the doves and the length of time before plowing determines how many more than average. Rains in the past few days may have slowed things that much, that is, in favor of dove-hunters.

NOW-NOW-NOW

We'll be hearing the pop and crack of the shotguns for the next few weekends.

It's a crackling reminder that fall is coming.

NOW-NOW-NOW

National Newspaper Association is putting out an interesting bicentennial history of newspapers, the third part just out on the "Wars", from the Revolution to the Vietnam War.

It's difficult to believe, but Isaiah Thomas reported on the battles of Lexington and Concord in the Massachusetts Spy of May 3, 1775.

War reporting changed considerably in subject matter, but correspondents right through the Ernie Pyles of World War II fame, Korea and Vietnam all shared one quality: courage.

Pyle caught a machine-gun round in the head to end his Pulitzer career.

Isaiah survived the wars to write history about it. Some are luckier than others.

It's good reading, even for a newspaper that's only 116 years old.

School Tax Rate Goes Up

ROCKDALE

Faced with a $198,000 increase in Local Fund Assignment, Rockdale school trustees have raised the school tax rate by 15 cents -- from 85 cents to one dollar per $100 valuation -- and adopted a record $1,529,404 budget for the 1975-76 school year. "If our Local Fund Assignment had remained the same we could easily have gotten by on the same 85 cent tax rate this year," the superintendent said.

First Bale Late This Year

SOMERVILLE

Burleson County's first cotton bale was ginned last week and was almost a month later than the county's first bale last year. The gin anticipates ginning only around 500 bales this year, compared with 2,172 bales last year. This is attributed to both poor yields and decreased acreage this year.

Low Bid Under School Budget

McGREGOR

With a base bid of $491,277 for the construction of a gymnasium and a ten-classroom wing for McGregor High School, Billington Construction of Waco was the apparent low bidder at the bid opening by school trustees. The bid came in under the $509,000 budget the board had set for the two facilities.

Tourism Tax Under Discussion

BELTON

A hotel - motel occupancy tax of three per cent to promote tourism in Belton will be discussed by the Belton city council at its regular meeting Sept. 9. The tax is approved by state law, which says the tax money can't be used for anything but tourism promotion.

Grant Sought For Dispatch System

GEORGETOWN

Williamson County Commissioners voted to seek a $15,000 grant from the Texas Criminal Justice Council to set up a central dispatch system, even though the system may only service the sheriff's department. It was suggested that by consolidating calls to the sheriff's department, fire department and the county ambulance service, tax dollars would be saved.

School Enrollment Down

ROSEBUD

Enrollment figures for the Rosebud-Lott Schools is down this year, according to Supt. Earl Cook. This school year began with a total enrollment of 995 students. Last year's total was 1,010.

Telephone Truck Rifled

THORNDALE

A General Telephone Co. service truck break-in at Thorndale netted about $1,000 in equipment for weekend thieves. Locks were broken on the truck and it was emptied of tools, wires, cables, spare tire, telephones, testing equipment, climbing spurs and safety belts. However, the thieves left intact two change boxes with about $40 in them.

Assistant DA Assured

GATESVILLE

Coryell County Judge Doug Smith indicated that the creation of the office of assistant district attorney for the 52nd Judicial District, plus two-year funding for it, is virtually assured. Coryell, Hamilton, Bosque and Comanche counties make up the 52nd Judicial District. They cite a sharp increase in the number of criminal cases in the district as the reason for the fund request.

Liberty Tree Coming To Mark Bicentennial

County courthouse lawns will be receiving a living addition from the Texas Forest Service and the Texas Forestry Association during the Bicentennial year. In a joint Bicentennial project, the two forestry organizations are providing a "Tejas" pecan seedling to each county to be planted and permanently marked on the courthouse lawn or other public area.

Pecan is the state tree of Texas, and "Tejas" (the Spanish word for Texas) is a new variety which grows well throughout the state and produces abundant shade and delicious fruit.

These Bicentennial pecans are called Liberty Trees, after the famous elm in colonial Boston under which the first act of public resistance occurred in 1765 -- the hanging in effigy of a newly - appointed stamp tax officer. This tree was a symbol of resistance to British rule and many towns planted or dedicated their own Liberty Trees.

These Twentieth Century Liberty Trees will be distributed to participating county Bicentennial Committees or county judges during January 1976.

According to John Haislet, head of the Information and Education Department of the Texas Forest Service, "As a reminder to Texans of the important role trees have played in the history of our country, these Liberty Trees will serve as a living tribute to the past, the present, and the future."

Preceeding the arrival of the tree, each county will receive an informational packet containing suggestions and support materials for conducting an appropriate treeplanting dedication ceremony. The packet also will include guidelines for planting, caring for and marking the Liberty Trees and suggestions for incorporating other tree-planting projects into community Bicentennial plans.

Grain Issue 'Ticking Like Bomb'

By Robert Trautman

WASHINGTON Reuter--Although a hold order has been clamped on new grain sales to the Soviet Union, the issue of grain exports is still ticking like a time bomb, with explosions possible in the grocery store and in next year's presidential elections.

The hold order was prompted by uncertainty over the size of U. S. harvests and fear by the U. S. Agriculture Department that it would be charged with aiding and abetting another "great grain robbery."

The export of grain--and the remaining domestic surplus--has always been tied to food cost, but since the great grain sale to the Soviet Union in the presidential campaign year of 1972, overseas sales have been tied to politics, too.

Shortly after the announcement was made last month that the Soviet Union had signed contracts with U.S. suppliers to purchase 9.8 million tons of wheat, corn, and barley, the spectre rose of bread at a dollar a loaf.

Another spectre also loomed.

The longshoremen's union announced it would load no grain for shipment to the Soviet Union until it was convinced the 9.8 million metric ton sale would not set off a new round of inflation.

Testifying before Congress, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns predicted a sizable increase in U. S. bread prices and said Soviet grain needs "frightened" him.

But Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, defending the sale, insisted that any increase in prices would be minimal.

Nevertheless, Butz issued a no-sale order to American grain dealers, blocking new grain deals pending a new U. S. crop estimate report schedule for September.

His move followed a preliminary report showing that while the U. S. wheat harvest would set a record, the corn crop would fall below previous estimates, due chiefly to dry weather.

Prompting him also was dry weather in the Soviet Union, which had reduced crop prospects there and thus placed Moscow in the world market for substantial grain purchases.

While new sales are halted, the longshoremens' protest continues. The workers' wanting assurances -- just what kind still unstated -- of no higher prices because of the sale, and the shippers demanding the longshoremen honor their work contract regardless of cargo.

The outcome of the politics of the labor unions is as uncertain as the politics of food prices is knotty.

Secretary Butz and others in the Ford Administration insist that initial Soviet sale will do little to increase food prices.

But their fear of a bread backlash reminiscent of 1972, and it's effect on the American consumer-voter and on 1976 presidential politics was undoubtedly a key factor in issuing the no-sale order.

In 1972, in the heat of the presidential campaign, it was announced that a 19 million metric ton sale of grain to the Soviet Union had been concluded.

Middle Western farmers were irate: The Soviet Union had purchased the wheat secretly through American brokers at rock bottom prices. The wheat scarcity which followed shot up world wheat prices and food prices in the United States and around the world.

The massive Soviet sale was a significant contributor to double-digit inflation in the United States and the Democrats took the Nixon Administration and its agriculture secretary Butz to task for what they labelled a major economic debacle.

President Ford and Butz do not want a repetition of 1972 this year and in next year's presidential campaign.

The Republican answer-for the 9.8 million metric tons and for any subsequent sale--is that there is more than enough grain to go around thi s year so big overseas sales would not provoke shortages and send food prices soaring.

The Soviet Union is believed ready to be in the market for another 20 to 25 million metric tons of grain.

The wheat outlook for the United States is estimated at a record 58,258,000 metric tons, 19 percent above last year's record crops.

The corn outlook is equally promising--despite a serious lack of rain in Iowa, the major corn state--with a predicted record yield of 148,588,000 metric tons.

Paving Project 'Working'

Administrative red tape has been the holdup on the Texas Highway Department's $100,000 paving project for Cameron, but plans are still moving along, according to Delton Kittrell, Texas Highway Department resident engineer at Hearne.

The project, which has federal funds involved, is part of a new type program started under the last federal highway bill and needs approval from both the State Highway Commission and the Federal Highway Administration.

Cameron streets included in the project are North Fannin from Highway 36 north to 22nd; 22nd from North Fannin northwest to US 77; and Industrial Road and Door Factory Road from 22nd northeast to US 77.

Kittrell said the project has been submitted to the Commission and the highway administration, more data was obtained, and the project was then resubmitted to the Federal Highway Administration. After approval from Washington and Austin, actual field work and planning will be started. He said approval was expected in the "near future."

Kittrell said the highway department under the new program is allowed to do construction work, not maintenance, and added that he feels certain there will be no probtem with the industrial road. "Other streets may have to be done differently from the original plan," he said.

Original plans called for new surfaces for Fannin and 22nd streets.

The engineer also commented on the highway project to resurface and improve Highway 36 from the Santa Fe underpass in Cameron to the intersection of 36 and 77. He said this project would have to "work to the top of the list" as highway funds are limited. "There are more projects than money," Kittrell said. "The highway department cancelled the August letting and has cancelled October letting."

He said there are no state funds available this year for the project, but things are expected to ease by spring of next year.

The Next CISD Year...

School enrollment is apparently going to be about 1700 in Cameron Independent School District, according to first - week figures.

This is about the total of the past five to ten years. It keeps Yoe High School at that point between a large AA and small AAA high school.

We note Buckholts Schools is changing superintendents and looking at accreditation.

It is possibly anathema to even mention, but wouldn't it be at least sensible to consider some steps toward consolidation?

Cameron is getting, however slowly, to needs of redoing the gymnasium and putting in a new science department area. Its ratings in athletics and band have never been any higher in AA competition.

It looks like another excellent year in both categories as well as general development of the system. Some of the old houses are becoming more than temporary and additional space would allow these to be torn down for parking area or new construction.

Eventually, CISD must break its lock on a one-campus view of things and go for some kind of ward system in town of grade schools. A grade school in Buckholts would be in that direction, should consolidation ever materialize, the same proposed several years ago when Milano and Cameron voted the possibility.

It should be a good year for CISD.

Cen-Tex Clears Recession...

The Texas Bureau of Business Research says Texas has demonstrated strength to survive the worst recession in 30 years beyond any other part of the nation.

But for Milam area residents, the future is even broader in view of anticipated growth all around the vicinity.

Bryan-College Station are expected to grow about 75 percent by 1990.

Austin will continue to grow with military and manufacturing payrolls.

Waco is expected to see considerable expansion, along with cities of similar size like Tyler, Texarkana, Beaumont.

These cities are the inner triangle around the Milam County area. The larger triangle is San Antonio - Houston - Fort Worth - Dallas.

And of course Texas largest city, Houston, is expected to be 3 million by year 2,000.

These developments insure continued development inward from all directions: Bell County, Austin, Waco (all along I35) and Bryan-College Station.

It allows room for industrial growth, continued health for agri-business and tourism around new lakes like Laneport (Bartlett) as well as Somerville, Belton and lakes in these Cen-Texas metro areas.

Texas indeed survives to a broader future, particularly in Central Texas.

Schools Face Unrest As Racial Imbalances Grow

By Roland Dallas

WASHINGTON Reuter - American city schools, increasingly filled with poor blacks, are facing an uncertain future of racial and legal disputes coupled with a shortage of funds.

More court orders to integrate city schools in the north -- which often serve compact communities of Polish, Italian or Irish Americans as well as blacks -- are expected in the coming months

Some of them will almost certainly arouse anger and possibly violence, as one did last year in Boston.

At the same time, city schools are becoming increasingly dominated by black students despite strenuous efforts to achieve integration.

Many American cities now face acute cash shortages caused by inflated costs and lower tax revenues resulting from the recession and are limiting expenditure on education.

But in some cities, like New Orleans, where the schools are dominated by black students, majority white voters have also rejected tax increases to be spent on schools.

Analysts are sharply divided over why schools are losing white students and gaining blacks but there is no disagreement over the trend.

In Washington itself, where more than 60 per cent of the population is black, the schools have a 96 per cent black enrolment.

In Atlanta, Georgia, where blacks make up 53 per cent of the population, black enrolment in the schools is estimated at between 81 and 85 per cent and rising.

Schools in New Orleans, where blacks make up 51 per cent of the population, have a black enrolment of more than 75 per cent.

Many other cities, like Chicago, Philadelphia and Baltimore, are in the same position.

Critics of racial integration assert that the trend has mainly been caused by "White flight" from the central cities enabling families to send their children to predominantly white schools in well - to - do suburbs.

They add that integrationists have only succeeded in making entire city school systems predominantly black instead of parts of the system in black residential areas

Ethiopians Seek Aid For Drought

By Peter Kayser

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia Reuter - "Why are you forcing us to learn Russian?

The question, only half joking came from a senior Ethiopian air force officer who asked not be named. He was voicing frustration at what he and many other Ethiopians feel is lack of support from the west for the nation's drought problem.

As he spoke, the officer prodded the government - controlled English - language Ethiopian Herald. On the front page was an article announcing that the Soviet Union was sending a five-man medical team to serve in drought - affected parts of the country.

He also pointed to another passage in the article which stated that the Soviet ambassador to Ethiopia, Anatoly Rantov, had agreed to pass on to Moscow an Ethiopian request for eight transport planes to help the relief operation.

The officer said that when the United States was approached for the loan of just one DC-3 lying idle with many others in Arizona, Ethiopian officials were told they would have to buy the aircraft.

What the officer did not say was that this year alone the United States has contributed more than 10 million dollars in grants to drought relief and recovery programs. But the feeling here is that such a sum is paltry for the richest country in the world.

Ethiopians believe the west is skeptical about the magnitude of the drought problem as stated by Ethiopia. And they believe that behind this skepticism is hostility to the socialist and anti - capitalist policies of the new military government.

The Commission for Relief Aid and Rehabilitation (RRC) says all of Ethiopia's 14 regions are affected by drought and that this year the nation needs 280,000 tons of relief grain to meet the problem.

Although Ethiopia is slowly recovering from the drought in the north, which was concealed by the government of the late Emperor Haile Saleasie, it is now faced with another in the south.

Colonel Tessemma Abba-Derash, Ethiopia's deputy commissioner for relief aid and rehabilitation, says that about two million people have been affected by the second drought which is concentrated in the Ogaden Desert bordering Somalia and in the southern regions of Ethiopia bordering with Kenya and the Sudan.

The area is at best semi-desert and communications are most primitive. As a result the RCC has to rely heavily on aircraft. Trucks are also used but the rugged terrain rapidly tears tires to shreds.

Colonel Tessemma says that between 50,000 and 80,000 people probably have already died in the southern drought which he estimates also has claimed about one million head of cattle and over two million sheep, goats and camels.

"We cannot beat this problem without outside help. We have to try to settle these people on the land now that they have lost their herds but in the meantime they have to be fed, nursed back to health and clothed," he said.

The colonel said the death rate was now dropping but that the situation remained critical with malnutrition a major problem. The situation was aggravated by nomads coming across the border from Somalia and seeking relief, he added.

In Rome last week the U.N. World Food Program announced food aid worth more than six million dollars for Ethiopian drought victims. In all, some 280,000 people will benefit.

Colonel Tessemma said Ethiopia, with 13 major rivers, was clearly in a position to harness sufficient water to prevent drought. "But to build dams, we need help and we need capital," he said.

Not that Ethiopia is sitting idly by. All adults earning more than 125 dollars a month must give one month's earnings to the RRC direct, and the government has budgeted some 15 million dollars for grain, road building, well digging and other relief related projects.

Furthermore, groups of high school and university students have been sent to the drought areas by the military government to help set up food - for - work projects, teach the nomads how to read and how to become farmers.

Legislative History In Making

The newly created Office of Legislative History is busy these days. It's goal is to complete a biographical file on all of the former members of the Texas Legislature since the first session in 1846, and so far, the progress has been good.

Former Representative Jake Johnson of San Antonio, serving as historian, is really having his time with history. "The things that are to be found are . . . incredible!" says Johnson. "I can't believe there's so much history dying, simply because nobody's ever kept up with it."

When the project is completed, the State of Texas will have a photographic and biographical sketch of each member of the House and Senate and know a little bit about what he did after he left office.

Johnson says, "We want to be able to tell anyone who might ask us, 'Oh yes, he came from Tennessee back in 1828 and served for three terms in the House and one in the Senate.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Doctor in Doubt

"I did my best."

So said a doctor not long ago when a disgruntled patient sued him for malpractice. It seems that the patient had been suffering for eight years from a surgical wound that would not heal. Now, demanding damages, he told the court:

"I realize that the doctor did his best. The trouble is, his best was not good enough. After all these years, he must have realized his own limitations. What he should have done was to send me to a specialist."

The court agreed, and the doctor was held liable. The court said that when a doctor has(-or ought to have) serious doubts about his ability to handle a case, he has the legal duty to send the patient to someone who is better qualified.

A similar duty rests on other practitioners of the healing arts. Take this case:

A drugless healer, treating a man who had severe abdominal pains, gave him a vigorous massage and a strong laxative. Result: the man died from a ruptured appendix. In due course, his widow sued the healer for malpractice.

At the trial, he insisted that he had used the best treatment according to his own school of thought. Nevertheless, the court ordered him to pay damages. With plain signs of possible appendicitis, said the court, he should have turned the case over to a regular doctor.

Of course, the mere fact that a treatment is unsuccessful does not mean the doctor was at fault. In another case a boy's broken leg, set by the family doctor, healed with some permanent stiffness. The family, claiming damages, blamed the doctor for not calling in a specialist.

But the doctor explained:

"This was not an unusual case. I have often handled similar fractures, and there was no special reason for me to expect trouble with this one."

The court decided this was a legitimate defense, and dismissed the case.

Shaded Lawns Need Special Summer Care

Shaded lawns require special care to maintain a satisfactory grass cover.

That means mowing higher and more frequently, watering more often, giving particular attention to controlling leaf diseases, and removing tree leaves that fall, points out turfgrass specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Shaded turf is weakened by lack of sunlight and competition from roots of trees and shrubs for water and nutrients," says Dr. Richard Duble. "Thus, grass growing is shade is generally shallow-rooted and is more succulent and less hardy than grass growing in full sunlight.

"As a result, the shaded grass is more susceptible to drouth stress and disease attacks," notes the Texas A&M University System specialist.

To reduce stress and to promote healthy turf, Duble recommends mowing the grass one-half to one inch higher than grasses growing in full sunlight. Also, mow shaded lawns frequently enough so that only one-third of the foilage is removed at each mowing. Thus, grass mowed at a height of two inches should be mowed when it reaches three inches.

Since shaded turf is shallow-rooted and tree roots are competing for available moisture, the specialist advises watering more frequently during drouth stress periods. And, since grass growing in sahde is not able to utilize fertilizer as readily as grass in full sunlight, fertilizer shoud be applied only in early spring and fall.

Leaf disease, particularly Gray Leaf Spot and Helminthosporium, can seriously thin St. Augustine grass that has been weakened by the effects of shade. So Duble suggests applying a fungicide containing PCNB, maneb, cholorothalonio, or cycloheximide to shaded areas at montly intervals during the growing season. Severe disease infestations will require more frequent applications. Treated areas should not be watered for 48 hours.

The specialist advises against using chemicals for weed control on St. Augustine grass in heavy shade since they may further weaken the grass and increase its susceptibility to diseases. Trees and shrubs may also be damaged by some weed killers.

"Removing tree leaves that accumulate in he fall will help the shaded grass. Of course, once trees are thinned due to shedding their leaves, a fertilizer application is n order," points out Duble.

"In many home landscapes, shade develops to such degree that grass cannot be maintained. Even St. Augustine grass, the most shade tolerant turfgrass, requires at least 30 percent direct sunlight to maintain satisfactory growth."

HOLLYWOOD

"The best things I have done in movies are the roles in which I looked the worst," says actress Sylvia Miles, a 1969 Academy Award nominee, who will co-produce her next film to try to improve her public image. In her 15-year career in cinema Miss Miles, 43, has played a succession of tarts, prostitutes, and fallen women. She made her name in 1969 by getting an Academy Award nomination for her seven minute role as a prostitute in :'Midnight Cowboy."

PRAGUE

Seven years after the Soviet -led invasion of Czechoslavakia, the country faces a dilemma--whether it can bring back to the fold experts and creative workers barred from responsible jobs because they oppose the official line. For most of the 14 million Czechoslovaks, the events of August 21, 1968 are something they have put behind them as they concentrate on raising their standard of living.

MODENA, ITALY

A stay of execution for the famous Modena-based Maserati sports car company has brought a certain optimism into the Italian specialized car industry centered on this northern town. After nearly three months of uncertainty since Maserati's French owners, Citroen, announced their intention to put the 61-year-old concern into liquidation, salvation has come from a series of tortuous negotiations at the Labor Ministry in Rome.

LONDON

Pressure is building on Britain's Labour government to limit an invasion of imports from filling the country with foreign goods while home factories cut jobs and gasp for lack of investment. Although the cabinet may consider some kind of control on imports as a last resort, Prime Minister Harold Wilson is seeking alternatives to help British industry out of its recession.

WASHINGTON

An era of low-priced air travel is dawning in the United States and for millions of Americans it will put vacations in the Caribbean and Europe within their financial neans. For those with a little more money and time it will open up South America and the Far East. Triggering it was a ruling by the Civil Aeronautics Board which, in many cases, will cut air travel costs by half.

Parents Can Help Child Avoid Football Injuries

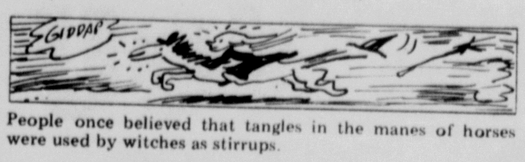
"Football season is almost here and parents are again worrying about their children getting hurt playing the game, but there are ways to minimize the risk of injury.

"Conditioning is a vital element in preventing sports injuries," says Dr. Gerald S. Modjeska, vice president and medical director of CNA Insurance's Continental Assurance Co., "and preventive efforts should be the name of the game."

Injury Prevention Tips

- MEDICAL EXAMINATION—be sure your child receives a thorough medical examination.
- CONDITIONING—seek advice from the coach about the proper type of conditioning.
- DON'T OVERDO—don't let the youngster overdo training. Several hours on a hot day or losing five or more pounds in one workout can prove destructive.
- DIET—a good, balanced diet is a must. Check with the coach, team doctor or family physician.
- SLEEP—if the athlete needs eight hours of sleep nightly don't let him cheat on it.
- EQUIPMENT—insist that the athlete wear protective gear and that it fits properly. Have him check it every week or two and repair or replace as necessary.
- KNOW THE COACHES—the coaches should discourage "dirty tactics" and emphasize safety.
- DOCTOR AVAILABILITY—a qualified doctor or hospital emergency room should be available for practice and games.
- INSURANCE—the team should have adequate insurance coverage. Generally, the accident insurance offered to all students each year by most schools excludes football.
- YOUNGSTER'S DECISION—let the decision to play football be the youngster's. But, don't let the youngster play when sick or hurt.

"Scholastic football is not the only area needing parental attention," according to Dr. Modjeska. "Many communities and organizations also offer extensive athletic programs. And sandlot — or 'pick-up' — games require even more attention than organized football," he points out.



People once believed that tangles in the manes of horses were used by witches as stirrups.

1975 YOEMEN

28 Yoemen Fill Positions For 75

1974 netted the Cameron Yoemen their first quarter-finalist team in the school's history and the hopes of an even finer team will be in the hands of 28 Yoemen who are presently filling the uniform for head coach Ed Cauley and staff.

Experience is the key for the 17 returning letterman that the Yoemen produced from that 10-1-2 season. From the 17 lettermen there are 9 offensive starters to fill the slots on offense. Defense was the key in 74 only allowing points in post-season play. On defense the Yoemen will return 7 starters.

Coach Cauley notes, "We are going to have fun this season and without having fun I don't think it's worth it." He also said, "Even if you win 15 games and the state championship and don't have fun it's not worth the effort."

Coach Cauley begins his fourth year at Yoe High and Cauley said, "When we came here the athletes that are seniors this season were freshmen and I said then that the number of athletes in that class was impressive."

Depth in Class AA of this potential is unbelievable and the positioning of players has been noted. The powerhouse Cameron Yoemen abounds a club of strength and talent for the 1975 season.

Self-Trust — The essence of heroism.

Joe began his football career in the seventh grade as a center and then was moved to fill the tackle position in the eight grade and and he has played there since. He also participates in basketball and varsity track where he has lettered for 3 years.

Smitherman was also selected to the All-District team for his baseball. He is a 2 year letterman and plays first base.

Yoe Band To Start Campaign

Wednesday, September 3 will mark the opening day to start the Yoe High School band's annual magazine campaign.

The Quality School Plan Company (owned by Reader's Digest) will once again sponsor the drive.

"This company," band director Jerry Bartley states, "is the largest magazine sales company in the world, and we feel they are very dependable."

The "QSP" Company handles the largest selection of magazines that the public reads. Each band student will carry a brochure with magazine titles and prices as they call on the Cameron and surrounding citizens starting September 3.

The band's profit is 40% and will be used to help pay expenses next spring to an out - of - town competition.

Bartley reminds the buyers to contact him if the magazines fail to be delivered within sixty days after the sale.

Anyone not receiving magazines from last year have the band student taking the magazine order to write the world "complaint" across the subscription; there will be no charge to have the magazine sent to the buyer again.

Happening about Town

It's Backyard Fiesta Time!

Bring south of the border flavor to your next patio or backyard party with exciting Mexican food and decor. No need to leave town for Latin American fun when you can create a festive atmosphere with papier mache pinatas, bright flowers, colorful table settings and authentic specialties as a recent Kraft Hostess Award winner did.

Guests can munch on spicy tacos and guacamole appetizers as a prelude to those filled tortilla favorites, Cheese and Beef Enchiladas. Refried beans, tortilla chips and hot peppers are the traditional accompaniments. Just before inviting friends to break the pinata and scramble for the candy and surprises inside, serve them one of the most characteristic desserts of an already rich cuisine—a Mexican pudding, made with caramels, pineapple and a rum-laced topping. Buena fiesta!

Mexican Pudding

49 (14-oz. bag) Kraft caramels
⅔ cup (5-⅓-fl. oz. can) evaporated milk
1 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon rum flavoring
1 20-oz. can pineapple slices, drained
¼ cup slivered almonds, toasted
10 maraschino cherries

Melt caramels with milk in covered double boiler or saucepan over low heat. Stir occasionally until sauce is smooth. Combine cream, sugar and rum flavoring; beat until stiff peaks form. Arrange pineapple slices on dessert dishes. Spoon caramel sauce over pineapple; top with whipped cream. Garnish with almonds and cherries.

10 servings.
